Somehow I put my faith in you. it's what I pledged I wouldn't do. pull the blinders from my eyes so I can see the day. the bottle spilled like pouring rain. our days have run their course and fled. I realize that we could never be the same as we once were. when I fall down, when I fall down again, I'm spiralling, when I fall down again. no exit from my gilded cage. my face can't hide the pent up rage, of seeing you go on and I just stay the same. my life was once a full brigade, of special times I spent with you. but my broken spirit tells the tale of my decline. when I fall down, when I fall down again, I'm spiralling, when I fall down again. now that I've had my chance today. to look upon this twisted state. I finally realize that I'm the same as you. I'm looking from the bottom up. I'm gonna pick myself right up, and turn my back upon the void that held me there so long. when I fall down, when I fall down again, I'm spiralling, when I fall down again.
