Swallow your pride, and run and hide and make your shallow effort, to make amends and be my friend. when I don't want your friendship. there's no excuse for your abuse and all the criticism, your second face will melt away when it all comes back to you. you used to laugh at me and call me things and say I wouldn't make it. well it's funny 'cause I'm laughing at you. you used to laugh at me and call me things and say I wouldn't make it. well it's funny 'cause I'm laughing at you. are you so sure I can't endure all of you indiscretions, put out your hand I push away, I hope you learned your lesson. a heavy load for you to bear upon your head and shoulders, I can expect this you'll regret I know when you get older. you used to laugh at me and call me things and say I wouldn't make it. well it's funny 'cause I'm laughing at you. you used to laugh at me and call me things and say I wouldn't make it. well it's funny 'cause I'm laughing at you. swallow your pride, and run and hide and make your shallow effort, to make amends and be my friend. when I don't want your friendship. there's no excuse for your abuse and all the criticism, your second face will melt away when it all comes back to you. you used to laugh at me and call me things and say I wouldn't make it. well it's funny 'cause I'm laughing at you. you used to laugh at me and call me things and say I wouldn't make it. well it's funny 'cause I'm laughing at you.
