She threw a coffecup
I didn't mean to interrupt
And so she went from side to side between the walls
I had on my corporatesuit
I knew she wouldn't find me cute
When I dared just to knock upon her door

I couldn't set it up again somehow
I couldn't let it slip away this time
And so my name is nobody
And so my name remains

She threw my bags outside
I didn't need to ask her why
I had been gone for days to see tomorrow
When her eyes were turning down
I didn't need to be around
So I left, but I left her there in sorrow
