Late at night,
You're on your own.
The kingdom's walls have crumbled,
And you're far from home.
Terror wakes
In the core again.
Destitution shakes you
In the fist of man.

Oh, I need a friend,
The night is falling harder, and I'm lost again.
Oh, how I long to see you Jericho.
There's no where else that I feel more at home;
I hope I don't forget you Jericho.

Sadness walks
In these empty fields,
Hours left 'til morning,
And the pain won't yield.
Guilty dreams
In an ancient fight,
Drown the recollection
Of a child's plight.

Oh, I need a friend.
The night is falling harder, and I'm lost again.
Oh, how I long to see you Jericho.
There's no where else that I feel more at home.
I hope you can forgive me Jericho;
Without you gone, I cannot grow.

Passion in the skies,
The fire in your eyes,
I'm calling you.
Present meets the past,
The future's coming fast;
What was old is new.
Destinies collide,
The fire in your eyes;
What's false is true.
The walls come tumbling down.

Oh, how I long to see you Jericho.
There's no where else that I feel more at home.
I hope you can forgive me Jericho;
There's no where else that I feel more at home.
I hope you can forgive me Jericho.
I hope you can forgive me... Jericho.

Ooo... Ooo... Ooo...
