"Bloody Hallelujah"

I carried you so close to my chest,
I could almost feel the moisture on your breath
When you asked me to sing you

A beautiful song
Before you were gone.
God, I hope I'm wrong.
It was a bloody hallelujah.
Oh Hallelujah,
Before I lose you to myself.

Then your eyes, they rolled back into the back of your head,
And the whites that remained stared at me in a manner
oh so sad.
My right hand was tangled all up in your hair,
And it was such a lovely sight as my gaze caught that stare.

As your stare turned into a gaze,
What a bloody mess we've made.
It was a bloody hallelujah.
Oh Hallelujah,
Before I lose you to myself.

The great white lights that took you Home
Left me here to wander this Earth all alone.

So I sang you a song
Before you were gone.
God, I thought I was wrong.
It was a beautiful hallelujah.
Oh, how I Loved you,
Yet still I lost you to myself.
