Said you'd found a way to end it peacefully
I remember finding shoes near the lake under a tree
And I'm sittin' on the shore

I thought I saw your charm float by
It doesn't matter now
'Cause all you wanted to do was die, yeah

If only you'd stuck around
I never would have made a sound
But now you're on the ocean floor
And I've opened a brand new door, brand new door

Swimming out to sea
Trying to find something else
While I'm skipping stones

And I'm listening to the shells
And I won't forget you
If someone else comes along

I found the words you wrote
But I would not dare to quote
My friends, the lines you amend
Like, "What's so bad about dying anyway"

Swimming out to sea
Trying to find something else
While I'm skipping stones
And I'm listening to the shells

And I won't forget you
If someone else comes along
You'll always come to mind
Whenever I hear that song, yeah

The one about photographs
Sung by Ringo Starr
Especially in the chorus part

You always said, "Now don't you start"
Don't you start, yeah, yeah

Don't you start, don't you start
