I was 24 when I filled up with hate. it became everything and it started with the state. now I think that feeling is more of a mistake, cause that shit can destroy everything we create. but don't fear death or your mortality, just let it be the motivation that you need to live the life you want to lead... and sing! we are nothing more than setting suns, so let's glow glorious until the day is done, and we'll all fall back down below the land... together underground is where we stand. the subway station flows with energy, but the people up above in their cars cannot see. the way my heart swells at the sight of a stranger. I wonder if they're lonely, if they're loved, if they've got anyone... by the tracks with suitcases, coming or going, leaving or staying... motion prevails... we don't know where we're heading sometimes. we are nothing more than setting suns, so let's glow glorious until the day is done, and we'll all fall back down below the land... together underground is where we stand. well I saw a group of people holding hands, and I asked if I could join them. oh I've never been much for religion... let's make love our revolution.
