Just like the sunlight creeping through the window,
picking up dust in the air,
It was clear for me to see, you had no idea I was there.
And when the daylight fades and the dust disappears, I will do the same,
You'll never get a rise out of me, and when you're left alone I'm not gonna' take the blame.

(No, I never once been alone in my life),
I'm not gonna' make a habit of it or get down about it,
'cause what you did was so, so wrong.
(You need to prioritise more than yourself, and learn from your own mistakes),
And at the end of the day, you've got nothing to say,
except you wished you'd realised sooner.

It's not hard for me to say goodbye,
You can say I'm sorry (but I don't feel sorry for you).
Not a minute was spent, thinking I'd regret,
Not giving you this one last chance again.

(Tell me now, what the fuck were you thinking),
When you tried to hold me at the sidelines?
(I've seen everything that in your haste you failed to hide),
You've been wasting my time, and now this is the end.

It's not hard for me to say goodbye,
You can say I'm sorry (but I don't feel sorry for you).
Not a minute was spent, thinking I'd regret,
Not giving you this one last chance again.

So when the sunlight creeps in, and reveals your guilt,
You'll be begging me for forgiveness, I know,
An epiphany of the most basic kind,
It's easy when you try, pursuing my design.
And the day came, for the setting to change,
Is it you or me who should feel guilty?,
I'm not putting up, parting or leaving you with it,
You've been wasting my time, and now,
This is the end.
