eternity is pressed against my eyelids by brittle fists that i cannot avoid and though each fingers grip has been relentless the moments they just keep on slipping by and i am now aware that i haven't always had been at this moment sat me there sitting by the fire and blue waiting for you and though ive been expected i've never quite accepted that the fire had suddenly gone out

the hands will fall away, the pain appeal the trees will say its okay cause i'm scared that theres no answer cause i'm scared theres no dreamers in this life of mine there is only time the illusion of which is gone all my words are spread across the canvas no one's seemed to see the things i say and those these eyes were once those of an artist failure has relieved me of a face and i am now aware that i am only the brushstrokes on the headstone of a man that never lived and this oh this, is this, a life that i have failed and i hoped to be forgiven the fire had suddenly gone out

so what is left waiting to be a man i hanged myself to the guilt to the end with your eyes open you stand standing still we got a lot to say, got a lot to do boys are in the street they just want to do what they want we dont care how
