We run off what we can't get enough of We choose to make it painless full of what changes is tonight just going to be another where we both lose interest. I'm letting you go just a little too soon for your taste has gone to the bitter part of your tongue you try to but you can't swallow the truth you just choke on the fact that you can't stomach this and why should you try when you're paying ten fold for the sins you've committed against this relationship What is so hard about this why aren't we holding on to the better part that we can't get back to why is trust so hard to build what is this plateful of guilt we've served each other for nights on end take all the small talk we've had ever night forget everything that we've said cause thats not what I w anted to say I'm hiding how I really feel we run off what we can't get enough of we choose to make it painless full of what changes why we hide the fact that we've skewed this image that we've both invented of love and why it's so hard for us
