I am sailing on the sea of life with no lighthouse ahead
I am on two boats with one foot in each one I stand
They are drifting farther losing balance I am sinking
Can I hold this façade?

And here I am you're thinking I'm the object of perfection
I live the easy life and I have no anxiety External looks and first impressions can be so deceiving
Do you see my façade?

This is my life and I am drowning
Can I keep two worlds apart?
Should I brace for a collision?
Don't see me more than what I am

I am standing on the mountain of uncertainty Should I take this leap of faith and pray I'll stay one piece
I am confused I am alone I don't know where I'm going
Do you see my façade?

And there you are you're thinking I have no important problems
That my decisions are just issues of conformity
But if you look a little deeper in my situation
There's so much you don't see

This is my life and I am falling
Can I find some solid ground?
Should I brace for a collision?
Don't see me more than what I am

You say you know me but you haven't got a clue about me
I have different layers and multiple dimensions
But if you think that you can understand me
Just open your eyes

This is my life and you don't know me

There's only been one side you've seen
Anticipating this collision
I'm so much more than what I seem
This is my life and I am changing
The future isn't clear to me
Are you ready for this collision?
I'm so much more than what I am

You don't know who I am
