all we need is a ten and five-er,
a car and key and a sober driver.

A couple of frat guys from Abilene
drove out all night to see Robert Earl Keen at the KPIG Swine and Sworea Dance.
They wore baseball caps and khaki pants.
They wanted cigarettes, so to save a little money they bought one off this hippie that smelled kinda funny.
And next thing they knew they were both pretty hungry
and pretty thirsty too

They found a store with a sign that said
their beer was coldest.
So they sent in Brad 'cause he looked the oldest.
He got a case of beer and a candy bar, walked over to where all the registers are laid his fake I.D. on the counter top.
The clerk looked, and turned to look back up and stopped.
He said "Son, I ain't gonna call the cops, but I'm gonna
have to keep this card"
the guys both took it pretty hard.

They met another old hippie named Sleepy John, claimed to be the one from the Robert Earl song.

So they gave him all their cash-he bought em some brews.

Was a beautiful day out in Santa Cruz
They were feelin' so good it shoulda been a crime.
The crowd was cool, and the band was prime.
They made it back up front to their seats just in time to they could sing with all their friends "the road goes on forever
and the party never ends".
