when I was running around trying to get kissed and throwing myself at anyone who'd have me you were one half of one thing with one girl and this seemed to go on somewhat endlessly but now that's all over for you I think it's time I had something just like that too I say my timing's bad, you say it's fine good things will come dear, all in good time softly the days slip by without making much sound I wonder if you have noticed I'm not around stifling these feelings of wanting to hold you and thinking of things that I shouldn't have told you will this true love ever come into being I'm used to passion not waiting and seeing

I say my timing's bad, you say it's fine we'll fall in love someday, all in good time blue christmas tree lights are hanging in place I am waiting to stun you with all of my charm and grace planning and scheming on when to steal kisses and tallying up all my grand hits and misses taking it slow doesn't sound so much appealing say it again now this time with more feeling
I say my timing's bad, you say it's fine
I don't believe this should take so much time

I can't wait much longer, short attention span won't you to sleep over, at least let's hold hands
