Pretty Eyes

my eyes might move but my body is stuck on edge to patiently predict if your next hit prevails let's dim these lights a little more so i can watch you burn a tad bit better a taste of pleasure would it hurt to ask for more?

and i never wanted more than just to watch you fade away i'm still stuck in this world this state of mind that still believes in fate i'm holding back but holding on to what i have i'll remember you for this you're nothing but pretty eyes from something smooth to rough around the edge you sucked me in so deep no rope could reach (to save me)

you've turned out the light you're so predictable

yet so impossible

it's impossible to figure you out therapy to my broken bones i'm hoping for a miracle but loving this ride

it's your name at the top of my lungs and i'm telling you this one more time just close your mouth and eyes and if you open up your ears you'll hear your hearts in sync with mine and everytime it skips your smile's what fills the miss inside and the hardest part of moving on, the hardest part is knowing you'll be gone
