"Happy Endings"

This town makes my mind slow down
Lines in my face like highways now
Chasing breezes, kicking boulders
And all of the while just getting older

I leave pieces of paper
Pieces of myself along the way
Out the window, out the window
And i tell myself that

I'll come back for them before i go
And then i won't sing this song tomorrow

Reason calls i'm never listening
There's always something more distracting
And you take everything so seriously
Then you leave and burn up on re-entry

For happy endings
All these little victories
Gathered up and hung on the wall like trophys
I tell myself that

I've been down this road before
So i won't sing this song anymore

I've been down this road before
So i won't sing this song anymore
I've been down on myself enough before
So i won't sing this song anymore
