"A Necessary Change"

As we stand with our backs to the breakers
We are looking down at a world gone dark
Where golden seas once washed on pristine shores
We are a new faith
We are a new face
We are everything in this world that personifies change

As we stand with our backs to the breakers
We are looking down at a world of pain
Thought we may die young, I swear, I swear we won't die in vein
We are a new faith
We are a new face
We are everything in this world that personifies change

And I go to the town that my mother died in
To the town that my father cried in
To the dirt that my mother lies in
And I go to the town that my mother died in
To the dirt that my mother lies in
To the dirt that my mother lies in
To the dirt that my mother lies in

As we stand with our backs to the breakers
We are looking down at a world gone dark
Where golden seas once washed on pristine shores
