"Pouring Down"

You still complain about the rain
And yet you choose to stand beneath the clouds from which it came
I won't criticize or pull you inside
You need to make your own mistakes to realize what's right

You did it again
Let the water rush in
When it pulls beneath the surface

When it pouring down I won't let you drown

You still push blame, never on your name
Refusing to accept the result is still the same
I hope you open your eyes, finally realize
No matter who's to fault, the water's on the rise

Time to accept there's only so much left
When it pulls beneath the surface
