Any power, in my world - you take it. Whatever strength, I should own - you take it. Any power in my world. Whatever force I could possess. Shot out. Brought to a barricade. As words come without meaning. Inside a hollow fear, we could fight until we die. Any power in my world - you take it. Short of the waterline, in a torrid sea. Weighed in the balance and I found nothing. Any power in my world - you take it. Behind the walls unseen. Pitted against yourself. In a struggle unperceived. We can fight until we die.
