Lost, stumbling through the light
Forgetting 'bout the night
As if we had a clue
What this world will do

And i thought you would always be there to hold
Burning candles and flowers beside the road
In silence, here, i sit
To forgive and to forget

You turning toward the sun
We never see the gone
We choose to turn away
Began another day

And we think we will always be here to dream
Then we find that it's much latter then it seems
As good as this life gets
To forgive and to forget

Lost in silence here i sit
To forgive and to forget
As good as this life gets
To forgive and to forget
