(R. Langdon)

Lucy's lost her shoe and she don't know where she put
it

But I hope she'll find it someday

'Cause hands that do dishes may be kind to your face

But stains they'll never wash away

Day in and after, she'd wait up by her window

Wait for all the clouds to blow away

But she won't recall that cold night in November

When her daddy made her play

Oh! Lucy, what went wrong?

You never had it bad

I'll think of you before too long

And I know you ain't coming back

Lucy's lost her shoe and she don't know where she put
it

What a terrible shame

And if only she knew how to turn back round and get it

She wouldn't all the same

Sometimes sits and wonders, and sometimes she'll just sit

Or making sure that everyone's OK

She'll often think of life before November

When her daddy made her play

Oh! Lucy, what went wrong?

You never had it bad

I'll think of you before too long

But I know you ain't coming back

Is that such a hard thing to do?

She's only got one shoe

Lucy, don't be a fool
