"California" by Wendy MaHarry i read the writing on the wall makes no sense but i read it all anyway some fear this flight afraid to fall my seat back they will set me straight in LA

california
there are thieves on the ladders pointing to the stars
california
well i had no choice
had to be there follow my heart.

those hills like lions lying down the way those cars go in and out, red and white the room i rent right down the hall music plays i can hear it through the sacred walls.

a letter home, no news to tell.
Hello. Forget it. I'm doing fine, doing fine. Oh well.
pacific coast promises crash, walk the sand as it slips through the hour glass
