In the heat of the violence
You can hear the scream that's rising from the void
It's breaking the silence, like the sudden sound
That wakes you in the night
There's no walls to cover
On the floor, there's only a rage of tapestry
With no light or power
Through the lonely nights
You sing familiar song:

Chorus:

"Don't walk away
Tell me you'll stay
Cause you can help me to find a way
To see the truth apart from the blue
In life so lonely
A world so cruel
Has nothing new
And so I'm shackled and lost without you
I'm holding on, please don't let go
And show me the way where do we go?"

The sun is already rising
As you walk down the street all alone
You faced another morning
And first you thought you couldn't make it
Through the night
In a life so demanding
It's so easy to fall down and give it up
After all you're still standing
Cause there's a reason you should try to carry on

(Chorus)

In my life I wish there would be guide,
A neverending light
That would come and help me through the darkest night
That would come and help me to find the truth
The answer to my question:
Where do we go?
