

Winters End

"Footsteps"

The flickers of the sun's ascent
Reveal the lines of your descent
The clouding over of your eyes
Catching a glimpse of time as it flies and flies
Away

The crossing over of our ways
The slightest movement of your hand as the music plays
The intense look that's on me now
Your body's miles away but you're so near now

With eyes, too soft to see
The jagged edges
That are surrounding me
The mist, shrouds my point of view
Clinging to the leaves, on their morning dew

It hurts before I've hit the ground
I'm wrestling with the knowledge, that I've just found
And right before I met you
I knew what my life was and what to do

But now, you're evading me
I feel the walls come up
And they're surrounding me
The laneway, is now grey and bare
Reminiscent of the footsteps
That we once walked there

Evading me, yeah
Ooooh evading me, yeah
