Hanschen, Georg, Ernst & Otto:
Flip on a switch, and everything's fine-
No more lips, no more tongue,
No more ears, no more eyes.
The naked blue angel,
Who peers through the blinds,
Disappears in the gloom
Of the mirror-blue night

Melchior:
But there's nowhere to hide
From these bones, from my mind.
It's broken inside-
I'm a man and a child.
I'm at home with a ghost,
Who got left in the cold,
Who knocks at my peace,
With no keys to my soul.

Hanschen, Georg, Ernst & Otto:
And the whispers of fear,
The chill up the spine,
Will steal away too,
With a flick of the light.
The minute you do it,
With fingers so blind,
You remove every bit
Of the blue from your mind.

Melchior:
But there's nowhere to hide
From the ghost in my mind.
It's cold in these bones-
Of a man and a child.
And there's no one who knows,
And there's nowhere to go.
There's no one to see
Who can see to my soul...
