Even though I stole a look, everything that you took
from me cuts deep,
And I'll take another step, if you take one closer to me,
and you see.

Lies upon lies, but I won't let go,
Ties that bind, we'll take it slow,
I promise no-one's got to know,
About the kiss from you I stole.

I've got your painting on my wall, it catches me a million times a day,
You hit me more than any truth I'd been told,
Took me to break the ice, took you to break the mould.

Hold me closer and closer, 'til my breath starts to slip
away,
Scream at me, shout at me louder,
It's a matter of time until you know my crime,
An eternity until the stars in the sky align, one last time.

The sight of you dressed up all in white, I still want you I know it's not right,
But I don't care, I need you tonight, (I need you tonight,
I need you).

The book of spite is opened up to page three, and I ask you can't you see?
The picture of you mocking me, I told you once, twice, set me free.

Hold me closer and closer, 'til my breath starts to slip
away,
Scream at me, shout at me louder,
Put me through years of misery,
Tell me you're gone and finally I'm alive in ecstasy.

Even though I stole a look, everything that you took
from me cuts deep,
And I'll take another step, if you take one closer to me,
and you see,

It was nothing to me.
