Now this one starts under a fine bliss
With happiness and a divine kiss
A loving home including three kids
When all was well before the sickness
But this one comes with an affliction
Consulted doctor with condition
And he found cancer in position
Now he brings dreadful premonition
Now I don't know from superstition
Or times when a soul has to turn to religion
But this young woman was faced with decision
How to fight in a war of attrition
And how to cope
And how to try
And how to reach
And how to rise
And how to live with her remaining time
And how to hope for something she can't find
Never in her mind
Ever did it climb to a place where her will was resigned
Faith so high they could slow down time
And turn these years to an endless shrine
But this is certainly a misfit
And it sure hurts to have to heed it
'Cuz she don't need no one's forgiveness
She just needs something to fix this

[Chorus:]

I know you're worried
Don't be afraid
I've always loved you
I'll always love you

You're pain it makes my body hurt
You need to know

I've always loved you

I'll always love you

Like waking up in a dream

And finding it's quite a new scene

With a hairless head and a grief so mean

And a sense of a used reprieve

'Cuz his wife's now frail and she's far too lean

And no one's coming to intervene

No one sure with a cure to be received

And she is ready to be relieved

Now there's nothing left to do but breathe

Now I can't speak from in the family

Or feign like I know firsthand their misery

'Cuz how could a father just ignore

His family of five will soon become four

And how does a woman tell her husband to hold on

When times get tough and she's left and long gone

How does a mother tell her daughter to be strong

For two younger brothers who have shuddered to move on

And it's so damn heavy the weight's on

It's too unsteady to ride on

But he's determined to pull through this terminal worldview

And come out it brand new

And no husband should have to bury you

'Cuz we all know that it can bury you

Your warmth is felt and we do cherish you

Know you're in our hearts

[Chorus]

You're pain it makes my body hurt

You need to know

I've always loved you

I'll always love you

I know you're worried

Don't be afraid

I will always love you

And I hear your call

Remember me
