I woke this morning in a different disguise
And I was crying, crying
You said it doesn't matter, it doesn't matter
It really doesn't matter at all

I caught the mirror as I opened your letter
I was lying, lying
I said it doesn't matter, it doesn't matter
It really doesn't matter at all

Another shipwreck, another heartbreak
Another shipwreck, I understand that
I may never see home again

Another shipwreck, another heartbreak
Another shipwreck, I understand that
I may never see home again

Scared to lose you but knowing the magic
It was dying, dying
I said it doesn't matter, it doesn't matter
It really doesn't matter at all

I hear you every day, I meet you at night
I see you crying, crying
You say it doesn't matter, it doesn't matter
It really doesn't matter at all

Another shipwreck, another heartbreak
Another shipwreck, I understand that
I may never see home again

Another shipwreck, another earthquake
Another shipwreck, I understand
It's time to admit

Despite our endeavors
Can't find whatever we lost

Another shipwreck, another heartbreak
Another shipwreck, I understand that
I may never see home again

Another shipwreck, another heartbreak
Another shipwreck, I understand that
I may never see home again

Another shipwreck, another heartbreak
Another shipwreck, I understand that
I may never see home
I may never see home
I may never see home again

I woke this morning in a different disguise
(Another shipwreck)
I cracked a mirror as I opened your letter
(Another shipwreck)

Scared to lose you but knowing the magic
(Another shipwreck)
I hear you every day, I meet you at night
(Another shipwreck)
