I think i'm running out of sympathy promises you've made but never kept now i'm over all the inside jokes that capsule the past they're all worn out

i think we're running out of alcohol someone make a run to get some more i think i'm running out of energy to emphasize these words that you warned me of

and i, would like to try just one more time

cause if i can find ways to rewind take back all those drunken ... lines i gave to you i think you've gotten way too big for me smoking out in cars you're smoking out your friends i think my tolerance for 'thats just him expect the words you can' has just run out. i think his cell phone calls mean more to you than i ever did or ever would

to october of our sophomore year and stop where we began and i won't let you tell me stories of smoking blunts in empty fories
save it for the people who will praise you for it

empty fories

looking for something, i've got it all right here if you're looking for substance, i've got it all right here looking for fuel to add to raging fire that is your ego look somewhere else
