Ninety and nine walked on without me and I stayed behind I thought they'd never see all the pain I felt inside myself from choices I had made and I wandered off to barren fields that my Shepard forbade

And my heart tried to find the way but my foolish pride kept me away so I held inside the things I had to hide and promises I could not keep When did I become this wandering one; the lost sheep?
Ninety and nine were left all alone and my shepard came to bring me home so many nights I had prayed and cried for someone to understand When suddenly above me was my shepard's hand and my Savior's arms calling me home.
