it's there where i had left you and it's then you should have known the reasons why a phrase that held the miles from decisions and you never called to stop it from goodbye and after my car was packed and these maps were spread like paint out on the dashboard you never thought to call me i'm driving the world tonight with your face on my mind all exempt from feeling anything at all anything at all

it's there where i had known you and i would live to breathe and think that you're okay a world that held the life from your decision to giving up and wanting me to stay and after the sun came up and let california take it's breath for nothing my phone was never ringing to tell me not to leave i picture your face tonight with your hair in yours eyes all exempt from feeling anything at all and the months went by like years i didn't see you i faked a smile bearing gifts of little hope this christmas will be my last time home i still think of you every time it snows let the sunshine while your hair dries it's my jersey/california life that i live somewhere inside from the valley where my heart beats in the nights we grow to feel alive i'm annulling our goodbyes
