I've been walking with my feet heavy for miles
But I can't complain because I'm almost there to stay
And right when I'm there, it starts to rain on my parade
The sun starts saying goodbye

Normally I would find myself awake
In the middle of the night
Would you believe in what I say?
It would make things easier to keep myself in place
The sun starts saying goodbye

Was there a chance for me to walk the other way
And now in bed I lay alone waiting for my phone to ring
And is there something I could say to bring you back to me
And fix this mess I've made

Every time I look into your eyes, I see the sun come up
It makes me start to wonder why it never has before
And when you fall asleep at night
The sun starts saying goodbye

Normally I would find myself awake
In the middle of the night
Would you believe in what I say?
It would make things easier to keep myself in place
The sun starts saying goodbye

I've been walking with my feet heavy for miles
But I can't complain because I'm almost there to stay
And right when your here, it starts to break apart the rain
And the sun starts saying goodbye
Goodbye...
