You ought to see your face
You ought to hear your voice
Last time that I was here
I wouldn't turn around

You ought to lock that door
Somebody might get in Didn't I, teach you that

This perfect world
So blue I can't begin to say
This perfect world
I know I should never have gone away
But I still deserve to say good bye no matter what I've done
No matter what I've done

I see her in your face
Hear her in your voice
Last time I was here, they found her in the lake

You ought to see my scar
You think I'm made of stone
Didn't you, tell me that

This perfect world
So blue I can't begin to say
This perfect world
They say that soon I will be gone away
But I still deserve to say good bye no matter what I've done
This perfect world
This perfect world

Now I've come around it's far too late
And these pills won't even let me cry
No one even knows you when your gone
But I still deserve to say good bye no matter what I've
done
No matter what I've done

You ought to see your face
You ought to hear your voice
Lock this, after me
