The last time I saw you my eyes were red from constant crying
Blue moon was at my door
You read my hand and told me all romantics go to heaven
To heaven heart to heart
We said too much too soon
I bled and let you pacify my wounded pride
The last time I saw you alone you shielded me from strangers
And saved me from the lord
And in my dreams I still have you
You're still my sweet compadre
Hiya, how grand senior
We said too much too soon
I bled and let you pacify my wounded pride
crying
Blue moon was at my door
The leaping of my ransomed heart
Said trees can weep and stone can bleed
We knew but we were unsure
We said too much too soon
I bled and let you pacify my wounded pride
We said too much too soon
I bled and let you pacify my wounded pride
