Heart above the sky

Before I met you, I thought love is to give as less as possible and take everything at the end.

But my world moved out into your copper eyes
I sank in them [the eyes] like in a quicksand when you said:

"Unravel my soul,
subdue my body

and the stars will knit for us a heart above the sky"

In this world of lies only you are the truth
In the middle of a dark ocean, [you are the] only island, light
It's like I am walking on fire, I rush to pass your doorstep
I throw my mask away and I open my heart to say to me again:

"Unravel my soul,
subdue my body

and the stars will knit for us a heart above the sky"

"Unravel my soul,
subdue my body

and the stars will knit for us a heart above the sky"

"Unravel my soul,
subdue my body

and the stars will knit for us a heart above the sky"
