

The Storyteller "Changeling"

Visit "Changeling" on MotoLyrics.com

An evil seed was sown in them
Envy against man
They watch the children playing
Their mind is full of rage
Because they look so beautiful
Their own just looks so mean
Their envy feels no limit
It's out of control
So in the dark they steal the children
Replace it with their own
Because they look so beautiful
Their own just looks so mean
Like a silent wind that sweeps the land
They came and took them away
And they took them far, to their new home
And the lives that they once had were forever gone
And the lives that they once had were forever gone
A life that dwells in shadows
Is now where they belong
And what once were human
Shall not be seen no more
And still they look so beautiful
But their hearts are cold
Like a silent wind that sweeps the land
They came and took them away
And they took them far, to their new home
And the lives that they once had were forever gone
And the lives that they once had were forever gone

Visit The Storyteller page on MotoLyrics.com, to get more lyrics and videos.