One hundred million of our future's best and brightest can't be wrong
It must be in the way they shoot to kill, then carry right along
I only hope that when the bold start to attack It won't be long before they redirect their troops and call them back
Here's a fresh new set of tracks

And I, I haven't heard a word you've said Why don't you spare us all instead
Just give me something for my head

I can't believe that you would fight so hard to try and keep me down
Lead away from the shallow water, drop me in to see if I might drown
When I'm sitting still I feel the pressure from all sides
In the look I get from every family member, friend and passerby
Doesn't matter how I try

And you, you won't be happy 'till you're through You live the kind of life I dread
Just give me something for my head

Why do I bother wasting all this time
At once your plans are fickle and sublime

One hundred billion of our future's best and brightest can't be wrong...
