"Oh, hold your tongue, dear Sally, as i gang tae the town

And I'll buy for you a jaunting car and a braw white muslin gown

I'll buy for you a jaunting car and a braw white muslin gown

And likewise a bonnie wee lap dog tae follow your jaunting car"

"Oh, the de'il gang wi' your lap dog, you jaunting cars and all

For I'd rather hae a young man tae row me fae the wall

Oh I'd rather hae a young man wi' no a penny at all

Before that I'd hae an old man tae row me fae the wall

"For your pipes they're never in order, your chanter's no in tune

And I wish that the devil would hae you and put a young man intae

Your room

I wish that the devil would hae you and put a young man intae

Your room

For I'd rather have a young man wi' no penny at all"

And now the old man's dead and gone, but he's left her a gey fee

He's left tae her ten thousand pounds and all of his lands sae

Free

Free

And likewise a bonnie wee lap dog tae follow her jaunting car

Oh and now she's gotten her young man wi' no a penny at all

Aye now she's gotten her young man tae row her fae the wall

But he's smashed her china cups and saucers; aye he's gone and Broke them all

And he's killed her bonnie wee lap dog that followed her jaunting
Car
