The first time that he came to me
I was a young boy little did I not believe,
I had a hole in my heart and I was looking for a piece that fit

The next time I was privy to
The dirty secrets, all the little hidden clues
And when I added it up, I knew a little but a little won't do

[Chorus:]

Can anybody ever tell me something true?
Preferably something that no one can dispute
When everybody's spilling lifelong secrets
I'm betting safely on the man who will keep his Despite his weakness
He'll take his secrets to the grave.
And we will leave it all, behind.
(Don't ever leave anyone you love behind)
So get your fill while you're, alive
(Don't you ever let them take you alive)
And I don't know where the lies end and the truth begins
Don't listen to anyone telling you anything is a truth, it's all relative

Though I know it'll never ever come to this
I have a secret
And the secret is there was a lie
That I told myself till it became the truth

Rest assured I have a plan b on my mind
If all the webs I weave should ever come and unwind
But I've got plenty of time

[Chorus]

I still believe
In mysteries
And all that lies
In reveries

And though they'll lay my body in the ground
I plan to never settle down

I took the medicine
But the pills won't work
The pills they don't do anything
But rearrange all the littlest things
And I know a little bit
But that bit won't do
The bit I know is irrelevant
So I guess this song is irrelevant too
