This city has lost a certain hold inside I've been around and seen one hundred scenes It feels so worn being chained here to this life Where those who dare to tread the wheel Spend half a life deciding what went wrong One day find out what's behind that hill Until you feel it's all part of some crazy scheme It conjours in you memories 'til Trying to find out what took you so long You discover what's behind the hill Into the stained glass cavern of the night You picked me up and we went for a drive You turn to say, your eyes fixed on the rows Take me from this place I know But I can feel its hand and it's guiding me in sign From lives I've tried to lead The ruined landscape that I once called home I don't know what in this world is trying to save me Will melt away in source tags & in code Each painted sign along the road To the one that I received
