Song: Art and Commerce

Some days I just want to get rest and

Some days I just can't sit still

I haven't seen a doctor since '86

And everyday I'm feeling ill

It's the same old sound rattling my bones

It's that ticking of atomic clock

And I'm a save a little money and see what happens

On my long trip up to the top

Would you walk on that line?

Ready to lose your mind.

Would you go down that road?

Not knowing where it goes.

How far would you go, would you go, would you go?

I don't even know the price of fame

But I hear that it's still going up

I'm a save a little money and see what happens

On my long trip up to the top

When you ain't got a dollar not even a dime

And it feels like it's all been a waste of your time

And you're sick of all the big shots giving advice

On how you should have been like them instead of wasting your life

And the man says "Son, we'd love to help you out"

But all they really do is kick you when you're down

And you're still trying everything to get it right

It's just that you know you're running out of time YEAH YEAH!

How far would you go, would you go, would you go?

I can't stop being the way that I am

Even if that way ain't cool

How far would you go, would you go, would you go?

How far could you go?
