Where will I be, when the sun won't shine anymore

Where will I be, when the moon won't smile anymore

Where will I be, where will I be

Maybe there's a place to hide for the frost

A place where life can get lost

Until then the end is near the skies will never be clear

Where will I be, when the sun ain't shining

Where will I be, when the moon ain't smiling

Where will I be

Where will I be, when the children stop crying

Where will I be, when the sun comes near flying

faster than a bird

Is this again the birth of the earth

No place to hide for the warmth

Where the rays can do no harm

Where will I be, when the sun is burning

Where will I be, when men is yearning, for deliverance

oh where will I be

Na, na, na ,na, na

Where will I be, when the children stop crying

faster than a bird

Is this again the birth of the earth

No place to hide for the warmth

Where the rays can do no harm

Where will I be, when the sun is burning

Where will I be, when men is yearning, for deliverance

oh where will I be
