

The Suicide Machines

"Bonus Acoustic Track (in album A Match And Some Gasoline)"

Visit "Bonus Acoustic Track \(in album A Match And Some Gasoline\)" on MotoLyrics.com

Oh yeah, critical mass, detonation countdown, July 16th, 1945
This is how we learned to fear the bomb and wonder how we'd all ever make it out alive And it's a strange love to love such a strange thing, you know I can't say I feel the same And it's irony to me that a burning sensation means a world so cold it freezes your brain

[Chorus]

Oh, pile the skulls up, there must be a million or more We'll pile the skulls on bones and ashes, there must be a million or more Oh, bury the dead now, there must be a million or more We'll bury the dead 'neath bones and ashes, there must be a million or more

Listen up now, Governments may create a world of hate in which we have to live and breath every day Fallout and radiation sickness, red pollution through the myriad waste Building their weapons of death and mass destruction, meeting out the justice by megaton Can we forget the Chernobyl devastation and remember the Uranium gone?

[Chorus]

One world or none, there's gotta be one world or none There's gotta be one world or none, there's gotta be one world, one world where we can

[Chorus]

Visit The Suicide Machines page on MotoLyrics.com, to get more lyrics and videos.