One day in El Paso

The cops go into the crowd

Under a glaring bladder of light

And the music is so loud

And the tourists take their T-Shirts off

A busload of kids gives you the finger

Afternoon when the sidewalk's hot

And the shadow's too chilly to linger

Walk past damaged goods and ugly trends

Past a strawman making a purchase

Downtown where the river bends

They're just waiting for you to resurface

Take a look at this photograph

Clearly his teeth were bared

He coulda been yawning or snarling

The story was never clear

One night in El Paso

The cops go into the crowd

Under a throbbing bladder of light

And the music is just so loud

And the tourists turn their T.V.'s off
And a bat sees a bug with the sound of a linger
Night time when the shadows cough
And you're chilled to the tips of your fingers
Walk past damaged goods and ugly trends
Past ol' strawman making a purchase
Downtown where the river bends
They're just waiting for you to resurface
Take a look at this photograph
Clearly his teeth were bared
He coulda been yawning or snarling
He coulda been anywhere
