

Hitchcock Robyn and the Egyptians

"One Long Pair of Eyes"

Visit "One Long Pair of Eyes" on MotoLyrics.com

In the tower the lover sighs

"Good Sir Knight, please take my eyes-I've used them."

"Doctor, doctor, I'm on fire!"

"Oh, I'm sad to hear that, squire-we're closing."

She snuffs you out like silk and pours you out like milk

But just before the dawn appears, draining all the blue away

And just before all your perspectives change

Isn't it strange?

On the black Fellini sails

Tattered rags that hangs on nails reminds me

You the mistress of your chair

I the sergeant of your hair-you blind me

You turn me on like light

A silver liquid light

That emanates inside of you, decorates the room around and

Just before the curtains part for dawn

And everything's gone

CHORUS

She had one long pair of eyes

One long pair of eyes between her
One long pair of eyes
So she could see you
On the lone Norwegian shore
Lovers weep for evermore in evening
With the clouds above their heads
Go back to their lonesome beds and leave them
She falls on you like rain
When will she fall again?
Oh just before the dawn appears, draining all the blue away and
Just before all your perspectives change
Isn't it strange?

CHORUS

Visit Hitchcock Robyn and the Egyptians page on MotoLyrics.com, to get more lyrics and videos.