I was standing at the crossroads
Of which way to turn and nowhere to go
Trying to get a handle on my life
Seems like everybody had advice
But they're not in my skin at night
And when it's time to turn out the lights
That's when I turned to the only thing that mattered
And I finally listened to my heart saying:
"Go on, this life is what you make it
It would be a shame to waste it one day at a time
So hold on, if you see a dream you chase it
'Cause you only go around once in this life
So roll down the windows and drive"
So I threw out all my baggage
That had held me here so scattered
And I gathered up my nerve and hit the road
About a hundred miles later, I was crying and elated
But I was praying, so I wasn't all alone
That's when I turned to the only thing that mattered
And I finally listened to my soul saying:
"Go on, this life is what you make it
It would be a shame to waste it one day at a time
So hold on, if you see a dream you chase it
'Cause you only go around once in this life
So roll down the windows and drive"
'Til I get where I'm going
That key finally opens that door and that's why
I drive til the moment I know I've arrived
Go on, this life is what you make it
It would be a shame to waste it one day at a time
Hold on, if you see a dream you chase it
'Cause you only go around once in this life
Roll down the windows and
Roll down the windows and drive
Roll down the windows and drive
