Bury the past in a letter Whiskey on the dresser thoughts never stray far from the first day you met her Your better half passive possessor Drink until your happy that you left her forget her Let it fester in your mind all the times she cried Eyes wide behind her disguise, pride denied By your spineless, kindless, mindless Timeless flaw the finest lost as to what your crime is Fine, you'll give her things to remember Pull a string and enter as she sings a surrender Pretender with tender messages and whatever suspends disbelief and the grief you present her Sensor the senses, the people, the places The faces, the tastes the wasted makeshift rings and bracelets Pacing, needing a facelift, in the basement faking Waiting for the chase to end It blends fine when you're blind to the spikes of time Give her a sign that you care and write the rhymes Some words to let her know you're keeping your feelings confined Against revealing the design, stealing your mind Tormenting innocence never listening, tears glistening loving simpleton Hand in hand with romance in a dance to oblivion, oblivious Wrapped in the riddle of the fickle and the hideous (I feel the fate) On her face, in her fears cause nobody cares in the end and that's life In her eyes as the tears multiply and you embrace till everything is right In the way that you move from doom to the top of the dizziest heights In the mood that consumes all that you thought you knew was true but not quite Home on your throne You told her that you had grown Read poems over the phone Believed it within your bones What a joke Should have known You've shown you're still a stone Apathetic, pathetic, a living drone Dial tone, destined to die alone Right or wrong, words never register Take the best of her Chew it up, spit it out Soon as you're ahead of her An obsessed competitor It's not her it's you ex-cetera ex-cetera She takes a step closer you take a step away Left to play with decay taking your breath away The disarray no more distant than yesterday All that's left is shattered expectations to investigate Let me demonstrate how you create the pain Place the blame on the rest and take aim Too ashamed to maintain so you complain Fan the flames, call it a game and never change You see romance as depressing, never a blessing They take from you until your left with nothing but investments Repressing feelings with no hope for direction No scope for reflection, no rope in case of rejection On close inspection she bleeds when you dream Feeds on your self esteem machine In between the scenes she fiends for someone to treat her like a queen But you treat her like a bitch till she screams exactly what it seems (I feel the fate) On her face, in her fears cause nobody cares in the end and that's life In her eyes as the tears multiply and you embrace till everything is right In the way that you move from doom to the top of the dizzyest heights In the mood that consumes all that you thought you knew was true but not quite
