(Larry Kingston)

When was the last time he kissed you
And told you how pretty you are
When was the last time you let him embrace you
As he whispered I won't go too far.

When was the last time you told him
We just can't go on like we are
But still you agree to let him keep seeing you
And you still say I won't go too far.

Does he feel the same when he holds you
Does he know how fickle you are
The minute you looked at a stranger
You'd already come much too far.

Now here we stand facing each other
We're parting you know that we are
But if knowing where I'm at will make you feel better
I promise I won't go too far.

Yes, I promise I won't go too far...
