It was five o' clock in a dying city
I was putting on makeup, trying to feel pretty
Looked around my tidy little home
Oh, I was tired of being alone

Had an eight o' clock date with a man
I never met, I hate to be late
So I headed east on Sunset, thinking
Anything is better than being alone

Now, I'm looking in the eyes of a baby
Now, I'm looking in the eyes of a man
No one ever could be more surprised than me
Did you see him smile? Did you see him smile?

Now, I'm looking in the eyes of a baby
Now, I'm looking in the eyes of a man
No one ever could be more surprised than me
Did you see him smile? Did you see him smile?

There was fog in the road
It was like I was driving blind
All the faces I've known
Kept running around in my mind

I was right to keep looking
I was right to look ahead, you never know
What you might find, I was feeling so old
And naive at the very same time

I had no idea if I could ever talk to a guy
If I could run, if I could leave
If I could hide, you know I would
But there he was and it was time

Now, I'm looking in the eyes of a baby
Now, I'm looking in the eyes of a man
No one ever could be more surprised than me
Did you see him smile? Did you see him smile?

Now, I'm looking in the eyes of a baby
Now, I'm looking in the eyes of a man

No one ever could be more surprised than me
Did you see him smile? Did you see him smile?
