(carolyn dawn johnson)

It's a perfect day for a little rain
The water's cryin' down my windowpane
Just like a little girl, the thunder makes me feel afraid
The trees are dancing in the gypsy wind
Guess they don't know yet that I lost my best friend
I can't believe that I'll never hold you in my arms again
I know we said that this was right
But how'm I supposed to make it through another lonely night

When my heart just wants to hold on to you
And my heart just can't believe that this is true
Maybe I can convince my mind, but it's my heart

It's only saturday and I feel so alone
We let go yesterday on the telephone
I guess it's time I learn to make it on my own
I know we said that this was right
But how'm I supposed to make it through another
lonely night

When my heart just wants to hold on to you
And my heart just can't believe that this is true
Maybe I can convince my mind, but it's my heart

It's a perfect day for a little rain
I'm sure the sun will shine on another day
