Have I scared you off again
'cause it seemes as if your cheeks are losing color Still you're eager to pretend and you're feeding me signs while you look for a place to take cover Go on, claim your right to know me But don't act as if you cannot see

That I am better than that so much better than that and I deserve more than that so you should treat me
better than that

When you're drunk and out of luck
I'm the ruler of your never-ending Drama
You are acting by the book and you're feeding me lies 'til I'm up to my eyes in bad karma
But I know as I wake by your side that you're not even close to my kind

'cause I am better than that
so much better than that I deserve more than that
so you should treat me
better than that

Now, I know you are confused but honey, what about me?
I never thought this would be easy but there has to be Something better than this so much better than this 'cause I deserve more than this give me something better than this
